

Making Things Right

B R I A N N I E T Z E L

With one of today's most divisive, hot-button topics—Christianity and the LGBTQ+ community—extreme voices seem to lead the conversation. Yet as you look to the quieter middle, where most of us live, you will find a more constructive and hopeful narrative playing out in the church.

Since “coming out” 15 years ago as a gay man committed to his faith in Jesus, Brian has consulted with evangelical churches big and small to help advance more productive conversation. He knows the tension of reconciling long-held beliefs with compassion for LGBTQ+ loved ones. From his vantage, many leaders are braving that journey, and rethinking their responsibility to LGBTQ+ individuals in and outside their congregation.

Brian invites us on that journey. Through statistics and stories, he presents the lived experiences of LGBTQ+ people, many with unresolved wounds from church and family. With empathy and mutual respect in place, we can better discover the Christian response and responsibility to the LGBTQ+ community.

In 2021, Brian launched Making Things Right to invite and equip Christians to better love and serve the LGBTQ+ community. His podcast mini-series was featured by Christianity Today and has over 15,000 downloads. His op-ed “Defending Positions or People?” was published exclusively by The Dallas Morning News, a Top 15 US newspaper. Brian lives with his husband, Dan, and two daughters in Atlanta, GA.

Example Topics

- Brian's Story: Three key chapters to navigating his love for Jesus and being gay.
- LGBTQ Stories: 86% were raised in the church. 54% left at age 18. Why?
- Church Conversations: Stories of churches examining LGBTQ+ positions/practices, without splitting their congregation.
- Quieter Middle: Extreme voices do not represent the majority. Most want a better, redemptive dialogue.
- Hesitations: Two key hurdles that keep Christians and LGBTQ+ people from reconciliation.
- Integrity: Loving LGBTQ+ people while staying true to your faith.
